

BLU_D10 — Teacher Guide Series: Classes 1–5

Blu Foundation | শিক্ষক গাইড [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Version: 1.0 DRAFT | Date: June 2026 Use alongside: BLU_D05 through BLU_D09 (Student Textbooks)

Introduction to the Teacher Guide

This Teacher Guide Series is the companion document to the five Blu Foundation student textbooks (BLU_D05 through BLU_D09). It is designed for class teachers who deliver the Blu Foundation etiquette and social-emotional learning programme to students in Classes 1 through 5. Each section of this guide corresponds directly to one student textbook, providing structured lesson plans, classroom facilitation notes, observation rubrics, and parent communication templates.

Why Etiquette Education Requires a Different Kind of Teaching

Etiquette and manners education is not the same as teaching mathematics or science. In academic subjects, the teacher transmits knowledge that students then demonstrate through tests and written exercises. In etiquette education, the teacher is simultaneously transmitting values, modelling behaviours, and creating a social environment in which students practice those behaviours in real time. You cannot hand a student a worksheet on respect and consider the lesson complete. The lesson is complete only when the student internalises the behaviour and begins to deploy it spontaneously — in the classroom, in the corridor, at home, and in the community.

This distinction has significant implications for how you plan and deliver lessons. Lecture-heavy delivery does not work. Students of all ages learn social behaviours primarily by watching trusted adults and peers perform those behaviours, and then by practicing them in low-stakes, supportive settings. The Blu Foundation programme is built around this reality: every lesson includes a modelling phase, a practice phase, and a reflection phase.

The Teacher as Model, Not Just Instructor

The single most important principle in this guide is this: You cannot teach respect if you do not model it.

A teacher who speaks sharply to students, dismisses incorrect answers with sarcasm, or treats some children more warmly than others based on academic performance or family background — such a teacher will undermine the programme regardless of how faithfully they follow the lesson plans. Students notice everything. They are acutely sensitive to the gap between what adults say and what adults do.

This does not mean teachers must be perfect. It means teachers must be intentional and self-aware. This guide includes a monthly self-reflection tool (see Cross-Cutting Activities section) precisely because self-awareness is a professional skill that can be developed with practice. Research supports the view that dedicated staff who receive structured support and engage in regular self-reflection produce the best outcomes in character and etiquette programmes [SOURCE_UK_02].

The SAFE Delivery Model

All lessons in this programme are designed to be delivered using the SAFE framework:

- Sequenced: Activities build on each other within and across lessons. Do not skip steps.

- Active: Students are doing, not just listening. Every lesson includes at least one hands-on activity (role play, group discussion, worksheet, physical demonstration).
- Focused: Each lesson has one primary objective. Do not overload students with multiple goals.
- Explicit: Teachers name the behaviour, explain why it matters, model it, and invite students to practice it. Nothing is left implicit.

The SAFE delivery model is associated with significantly larger effect sizes in social-emotional learning programmes and has been shown to produce long-lasting effects on student behaviour and wellbeing when implemented consistently [SOURCE_GL_02] [SOURCE_GL_03].

How to Use This Guide Alongside the Student Textbook

Each class section of this guide opens with an overview of the corresponding student textbook and a suggested schedule. The lesson plans in this guide correspond to the chapters in the student textbook. You should always read the relevant chapter of the student textbook before preparing your lesson. The lesson plans in this guide assume you are familiar with the story, scenario, or case study in the student textbook and can deliver it with appropriate pacing and expression.

Where the student textbook includes activities (rhymes, worksheets, checklists, role play scripts), this guide tells you how to facilitate those activities — not just what they are.

Schedule Recommendation

The programme is designed to be delivered over 10 weeks per class level, at a pace of 2–3 class periods per week of 40 minutes each. At 2 periods per week, the programme runs the full term. At 3 periods per week, it leaves room for review, makeup sessions, or deepening activities.

Do not attempt to deliver the programme in fewer sessions by compressing multiple chapters. The programme works through repetition and practice over time. Rushing undermines its effectiveness.

A Final Word

The children in your classroom are watching how you treat them and how you treat your colleagues. They are watching whether you listen when they speak. They are watching whether you apologise when you make a mistake. Every interaction you have with them is a lesson in etiquette — whether you intended it to be or not. Use that reality deliberately and generously.

General Pedagogical Principles for Etiquette Education

Creating a Safe Classroom

Etiquette education often surfaces personal material: how children were raised, what norms their families observe, whether they have ever been bullied or excluded. For this learning to occur, students must feel genuinely safe — not just physically safe, but emotionally safe.

In Week 1 of any class level, establish explicit ground rules with the class. Suggested rules include: "We do not laugh at each other's answers," "What we share in this class, we keep in this class," "There is no wrong way to try," and "We can disagree with ideas but not be unkind to people." Write these rules together as a class activity and display them visibly in the classroom for the full term. Students who participated in creating the rules are more likely to honour them.

Never use public shaming as a behaviour management tool in this programme. If a student fails to demonstrate a behaviour (for example, interrupts during sharing circle), redirect gently and privately where possible: "Let's remember our talking stick rule." A public correction of one student creates anxiety in all other students and directly contradicts the programme's core message about respectful communication.

Non-Marks-Based Assessment

This programme does not use marks, grades, or rankings to assess student progress. Ranking children by "best manners" is counterproductive: it externalises motivation (students perform for the grade rather than for genuine understanding) and can humiliate children whose home environments have not provided them with the same foundation as their peers.

Instead, assessment is observation-based. Each class section of this guide includes an observation rubric with three levels: Not Yet Observed, Emerging, and Consistent. Teachers use this rubric to track individual student progress over the term. At the end of term, teachers write a short narrative comment for each student — not a mark — describing what the student has demonstrated and what they are working toward.

Managing Sensitive Discussions

Some chapters in this programme address topics that may surface difficult personal experiences: hygiene (which may relate to poverty or home conditions), bullying and exclusion, family conflict, and personal boundaries. Facilitate these discussions with care.

When a student shares something personal, thank them for sharing and move the discussion forward without dwelling on their situation. If a student appears distressed during a discussion, allow them to step back ("You don't have to share today — you can just listen") and follow up with them privately after class.

When to Refer

This programme is an etiquette and social-emotional learning programme. It is not therapy, counselling, or child protection intervention. If a student discloses abuse, ongoing domestic violence, severe bullying, or significant mental health distress, this is beyond the scope of the programme. Follow your school's child protection and referral protocol immediately. Do not attempt to address these situations within the programme's activities.

Signs that a student may need additional support beyond this programme include: persistent inability to engage with others despite consistent instruction; extreme withdrawal or aggression; disclosure of harm; or significant regression in previously demonstrated behaviours.

Gender-Equitable Facilitation

Be vigilant about reinforcing harmful gender norms in discussion. Etiquette programmes historically have assigned different standards of behaviour to girls and boys in ways that reflect and reinforce inequality. This programme does not do so, and neither should your facilitation. Assign roles in role plays across gender lines. Do not frame caring, listening, or gentleness as "girls' behaviours." Do not frame assertiveness or leadership as "boys' behaviours." When students themselves reproduce these stereotypes in discussion, gently redirect: "Actually, everyone can be a good listener — let's see who in our class demonstrates that best." [SOURCE_BD_17] [SOURCE_ALT_06]

Cultural Sensitivity

Students in your class may come from different religious backgrounds: Muslim, Hindu, Christian, and others. The programme is designed to be inclusive and does not privilege any one religious tradition. Where greetings, practices, or norms are discussed, offer the range of relevant expressions and affirm that all are valid. If a specific example in the student textbook feels inappropriate for your class context, use the inclusive alternative framing provided in the lesson notes, or contact Blu Foundation for guidance.

CLASS 1 TEACHER GUIDE

Overview

Item	Detail
Student Textbook	BLU_D05 "Hello, Good Me!"
Ages	6–7
Methodology	Story-based with songs and rhymes
Schedule	2–3 × 40-minute periods per week
Duration	10 weeks (2 chapters per week, 5 chapters total)
Assessment	Observation rubric; no marks

Class 1 students are at the beginning of their social formation. Many will be encountering formal social expectations for the first time in a structured school environment. The story-based methodology of BLU_D05 is designed for this developmental stage: narrative and song are how young children make sense of the world. Keep lessons energetic, warm, and repetitive. Young children need to hear and practice the same thing many times before it becomes a habit.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 1 — Magic Words

Learning Objective: Students use "please" and "thank you" correctly in 3 or more situations.

Materials: Story pages from BLU_D05 Chapter 1; puppets or soft toys (optional but highly effective); sticker chart (one per student); 3–4 scenario prompt cards

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask the class: "What are some magic words?" Accept 3–4 answers warmly. If students say "please" or "thank you," affirm enthusiastically. If they say other things (like a spell or a funny word), accept them playfully and steer: "Yes! And what about magic words that make people feel happy?" Write or display: PLEASE / THANK YOU / SORRY.

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the story aloud with full expression — change your voice for different characters, pause dramatically, make eye contact with students. At moments where the character should use a magic word but hesitates, pause and ask: "What should Rafi say here?" Take 2–3 responses before revealing what happens.

Puppet (or soft toy) role play: Use 3–4 volunteers. The teacher operates one puppet; the volunteer operates another (or just holds it). Play out simple scenarios: asking for something, receiving a gift, someone helping them pick up dropped books. Coach students gently: "What does your puppet say now?"

Whole class sings or chants the Chapter 1 rhyme together 3 times. Clap the rhythm together on the third round.

Reflection (10 minutes) Ask: "When did you last say please or thank you today — even before school?" Allow 4–5 students to share briefly. Validate all responses. Hand out the sticker chart and explain: "Every time someone notices you using a magic word this week, you get a star. I'll be watching too!"

Assessment Method Observe students during the week — during transitions, at the water fountain, in the canteen. Does the student use please and thank you without being prompted? Mark the observation rubric accordingly.

Differentiation For students who are shy or reluctant to speak aloud: allow them to whisper the magic word to you privately, or nod to show agreement when a classmate shares an answer. Never force public performance. Build trust first.

Teacher Notes The sticker chart is a motivator, not a grade. Never tell a student they have "failed" to earn stickers. Focus on growth: "You used please twice this week — let's aim for three times next week!"

Lesson Plan: Chapter 2 — Greetings

Learning Objective: Students use the correct greeting in 4 different situations.

Materials: Flashcards with greeting words in Bengali and English [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]; BLU_D05 Chapter 2 story pages; optional: a simple role-play map drawn on the board (showing "home," "school gate," "classroom," "mosque/temple")

Warm-up (5 minutes) Without saying anything, greet the class in three different ways — first with "Assalamu Alaikum" (with hand on heart), then with "Adab" (a respectful nod), then with "Good morning!" (bright and cheerful). Ask: "What was different about each greeting? Why did I use different ones?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the story. Pause after each greeting moment to ask: "Why did they use that greeting? Who were they talking to?"

Practice greetings physically in pairs: students stand, make eye contact, and use the appropriate greeting. Rotate partners twice so students practice with 2–3 different classmates.

Rapid-fire role play: the teacher calls out a situation ("You see your grandmother at the door!" / "You walk into your classroom!" / "You meet a friend on the street!") and students must immediately use the right greeting — as a class or with a partner. Keep the pace fun and quick.

Reflection (10 minutes) "Which greeting was hardest to use? Why?" Allow open discussion. Affirm that it's normal to feel shy about greetings — it gets easier with practice. Ask: "How do you think the other person feels when you greet them first?"

Assessment Method Observation checklist: Does the student greet the teacher upon entering the classroom each day? Mark emerging or consistent as observed over 2 weeks.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 3 — Listening

Learning Objective: Students listen without interrupting for 2 or more minutes.

Materials: A "talking stick" (any object — a wooden ruler, a rolled-up magazine, a colourful pen); a timer; BLU_D05 Chapter 3 story pages

Warm-up (5 minutes) Demonstrate bad listening: look out the window while a student is speaking, interrupt a student mid-sentence, check your nails, start talking to someone else. Ask: "What was I doing wrong? How did it feel?" Take 3–4 responses.

Main Activity (25 minutes) Introduce the talking stick rule: "Only the person holding this stick may speak. Everyone else listens with their whole body — eyes front, ears open, mouth closed." Hold the stick up and demonstrate.

Read the story together. Run a class sharing circle: arrange chairs in a circle (or use the existing classroom layout). Each student holds the stick, shares one sentence about the topic (for example: "One thing I like about my family is..."), and passes it on. Set a timer. No one interrupts. Teacher participates as an equal member of the circle.

Debrief: What was hard about not interrupting? What did you notice when someone really listened to you?

Reflection (10 minutes) "What was hard about not interrupting?" Open discussion. Normalise the difficulty: "Even adults find this hard! That's why we practice." Ask: "Why do you think listening makes people feel respected?"

Assessment Method Observe the sharing circle: does the student wait for the talking stick? Does the student look at the speaker? Note on rubric.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 4 — Hygiene

Learning Objective: Students name 4 hygiene habits and correctly demonstrate the 6-step handwashing sequence.

Materials: Soap and water basin (or paper towels for mime if no basin available); the 6-step handwashing poster (from BLU_D05 or standard health authority version); BLU_D05 Chapter 4 story pages; morning routine drawing template

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask: "What do you do first when you wake up in the morning?" Take 4–5 answers. Write them on the board. Ask: "Why do we do these things? Who taught you?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the story. Discuss: Why did [character] get sick? What could they have done differently?

Demonstrate 6-step handwashing with full narration, going slowly. Name each step as you do it: wet, lather, scrub backs of hands, scrub between fingers, rinse, dry. Ask students to count along.

Students practice in pairs, miming the steps if no water is available. One student is the "teacher" and coaches the other through the steps, then switch.

Discuss: Why does handwashing before eating matter? What other hygiene habits can we name? (Tooth brushing, clean uniform, cutting nails, bathing.) List 4 on the board and have students copy them into their textbook.

Reflection (10 minutes) Students complete their "morning routine drawing" — drawing and labelling (or asking the teacher to help label) the hygiene steps they take each morning.

Assessment Method Observe over 2 weeks: do students arrive with clean hands? Do they wash hands before the class's shared snack time? Note on rubric.

Teacher Note Handle hygiene discussions with sensitivity. Some students may not have running water at home or may face conditions that make certain hygiene habits difficult. Never single out a student or make hygiene discussions feel like criticism. Frame everything as "what we aim for" and "how we help each other."

Lesson Plan: Chapter 5 — Sharing

Learning Objective: Students share voluntarily in at least one classroom activity.

Materials: A communal item to share — a snack (if permitted and equitable), a set of coloured pencils, or a box of stickers; sharing circle chairs; BLU_D05 Chapter 5 story pages; the "sharing star" colouring sheet from BLU_D05

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask: "Can you remember a time when someone shared something with you? How did it make you feel?" Take 3–4 responses. Ask: "Can you remember a time when YOU shared something? How did that feel?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the story. Pause at the sharing moment: "Why was it hard for [character] to share? What changed their mind?"

Sharing circle: Each student selects one item from the communal set and passes it to the classmate on their left with a kind word ("Here you go, I thought you'd like the blue one"). Observe: Is the giving genuine? Is the receiving gracious?

Class discussion: "How did giving feel? How did receiving feel? Is it always easy to share? When is it hardest?"

Reflection (10 minutes) Students colour their sharing star and write (or dictate) one thing they will share with someone today — a pencil, their lunch, their time, a kind word.

Assessment Method Observation over the week: any spontaneous sharing moments in the classroom? Note on rubric.

Class 1 Observation Rubric

Behaviour	Not Yet Observed	Emerging	Consistent
Uses "please" and "thank you" spontaneously
Uses appropriate greeting with teacher
Listens without interrupting during sharing time
Arrives with clean hands and tidy uniform
Shares with classmates without being prompted

Rubric guidance: "Not Yet Observed" means the behaviour has not appeared even when prompted. "Emerging" means the behaviour appears occasionally or when reminded. "Consistent" means the behaviour appears reliably without prompting. Complete the rubric at the midpoint and end of term.

Class 1 Parent Letter Template [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Your child is currently taking part in the Blu Foundation Manners and Etiquette Programme. This term in Class 1, your child is learning five core habits: using magic words (please and thank you), giving appropriate greetings, listening without interrupting, practising good hygiene, and sharing with others.

You can help at home by:

1. Noticing and naming it when your child uses a magic word: "I heard you say thank you — that made me feel good."

2. Greeting your child in the morning with the same warmth you expect from them: modelling is the best teacher.
3. Asking your child each evening: "Did you share anything with someone today?"

Please do not reward or punish your child based on their progress in this programme. We do not assign marks — we celebrate growth.

If you have any questions or observations to share with us, please contact [Teacher Name] at [school contact details].

With warm regards, [Teacher Name] [School Name]

CLASS 2 TEACHER GUIDE

Overview

Item	Detail
Student Textbook	BLU_D06 "I Eat, I Care"
Ages	7–8
Methodology	Activity-based with role play and checklists
Schedule	2–3 × 40-minute periods per week
Duration	10 weeks
Assessment	Observation rubric; parent-reported behaviours; no marks

Class 2 builds on the foundational habits established in Class 1. Students at age 7–8 are beginning to develop a stronger sense of social identity — they are aware of how they appear to others and are motivated by belonging. This is a powerful lever for etiquette education: frame manners as "what people like us do" rather than "rules you must follow." The activity-based methodology of BLU_D06 gives students ownership of their learning through checklists, role play, and hands-on practice.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 1 — Dining Manners

Learning Objective: Students demonstrate 5 correct dining manners during a role-play meal scenario.

Materials: Picture cards showing dining scenarios (from BLU_D06 or teacher-made); act-out props (plastic plates, cups, and cutlery if available; folded paper as placeholders if not); BLU_D06 Chapter 1 story pages; Good Habits Checklist (from BLU_D06)

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask: "Name one rule your family has at mealtimes." Take 4–5 responses. Write them on the board. Ask: "Why do you think that rule exists?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the dining scenario in BLU_D06. Picture card matching: individually, students match the picture card (showing a dining behaviour) to the label (correct or incorrect). Review as a class — show each card and take a vote.

Paired role play: One student is the "host," one is the "guest" at a meal. They set up their "table" (props or imagination), greet each other, and role-play a meal with attention to the 5 dining manners (eating with the right hand, waiting for elders, not speaking with a full mouth, saying Bismillah/grace before eating, thanking the host). Rotate roles.

Debrief as a class: "Which manners were hardest to remember? Which felt most natural? Which surprised you — you didn't think of it as a manner before?"

Reflection (10 minutes) Students fill in the Good Habits Checklist for the week — marking which dining manners they will try to practice at home.

Assessment Method Ask students to demonstrate one dining manner on request — observe correctness of execution. Note on rubric.

Lesson Plans: Chapters 2–5 (Summary Format)

Chapter 2 — Handwashing and Food Hygiene

Objective: Students correctly perform the 6-step handwashing sequence before eating and explain why each step matters.

Materials: BLU_D06 Chapter 2 pages; handwashing poster; soap and basin or paper towel mime materials.

Warm-up: Show a picture of dirty hands. Ask: "What happens if we eat with hands like this?" Take responses.

Main Activity: Review and practice the 6-step handwashing sequence from Class 1 — emphasise that Class 2 students are now "experts" who can teach younger children. Role play: students teach a soft toy or a partner to wash their hands correctly, narrating each step. Discuss food hygiene: covered food, not sharing utensils when ill, washing fruits and vegetables.

Reflection: Students write (or draw) a "before eating" checklist for home.

Assessment: Observe whether students wash hands correctly when given the opportunity. Can they name all 6 steps from memory?

Chapter 3 — Borrowing and Sharing

Objective: Students ask permission before borrowing and return borrowed items in good condition.

Materials: BLU_D06 Chapter 3 pages; a set of shared classroom items (pencils, rulers, erasers); role-play scenario cards.

Warm-up: Ask: "Has anyone ever taken something of yours without asking? How did it feel?" Take 3–4 responses.

Main Activity: Read the scenario. Role play: using scenario cards, students practice the three-step borrowing sequence: Ask ("May I please borrow your...?") — Wait for answer — Return with thanks. Discuss: what if the person says no? Is that okay? (Yes — it's their choice.) Run 4–5 different scenarios with different pairs.

Reflection: "Is there a difference between sharing and borrowing? What is it?"

Assessment: Observe over the week — does the student ask before taking a classmate's item?

Chapter 4 — Gratitude and Kindness

Objective: Students perform one unprompted kind act per day for one week and reflect on how it felt.

Materials: BLU_D06 Chapter 4 pages; "Kindness Calendar" (one per student — 5 boxes for 5 days).

Warm-up: Ask: "Name one kind thing someone did for you recently. Did they have to do it? Why do you think they did?"

Main Activity: Read the story. Introduce the Kindness Calendar: each day this week, do one kind act (hold a door, help someone pick up dropped books, give a compliment, let someone go first). It doesn't have to be big. Write or draw it in the box. Share one example at the start of each class this week.

Reflection: At end of week: "Which kind act felt the most meaningful — giving or receiving? Did anything surprise you?"

Assessment: Kindness Calendar completion; observation of spontaneous kind acts; parent-reported acts at home.

Chapter 5 — Respecting Property and Public Spaces

Objective: Students identify 3 rules for using public spaces respectfully and demonstrate them in the school environment.

Materials: BLU_D06 Chapter 5 pages; photos or drawings of public spaces (canteen, library, prayer room, playground); scenario cards.

Warm-up: Show a photo of a messy public space (litter, broken furniture). Ask: "How does this make you feel? Who is responsible for this?"

Main Activity: Discuss: What are public spaces? What rules apply in the canteen? In the library? On the street? Students generate the rules themselves — teacher writes them up. Scenario role play: students respond to situations (finding someone else's litter, seeing someone damage school property, being too loud in the library). What do they do?

Reflection: "If everyone thought, 'Someone else will clean it up' — what would our school look like? What about our street?"

Assessment: Observation in actual public spaces of the school (canteen walkthrough, corridor behaviour). Note on rubric.

Class 2 Observation Rubric

Behaviour	Not Yet Observed	Emerging	Consistent
Eats with right hand
Waits for elders at mealtimes (parent-reported)
Demonstrates 6-step handwashing when asked
Asks before borrowing classmates' belongings
Performs unprompted kind act (observed or parent-reported)

Class 2 Parent Letter Template [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Your child is continuing the Blu Foundation Manners and Etiquette Programme in Class 2. This term, they are focusing on five areas: dining manners, food hygiene, borrowing and sharing, gratitude and kindness, and respecting public spaces.

You can help at home by:

1. Noticing mealtimes: Does your child wait for elders? Eat with the right hand? You don't need to correct — just notice and mention it positively when they do it.
2. Asking your child to tell you about the Kindness Calendar — what did they do this week?
3. When you are in a public space together (market, street, mosque), quietly point out respectful behaviour and name it: "Look how that person picked up their litter — that's community respect."

As always, please do not punish your child for anything related to this programme. We are building habits with encouragement, not pressure.

With warm regards, [Teacher Name] [School Name]

CLASS 3 TEACHER GUIDE

Overview

Item	Detail
Student Textbook	BLU_D07 "Respect Around Me"
Ages	8–9
Methodology	Role play and group activities
Schedule	2–3 × 40-minute periods per week
Duration	10 weeks
Assessment	Observation rubric; reflective writing; no marks

Class 3 marks a significant shift in complexity. Students at age 8–9 are capable of perspective-taking — understanding that other people have different experiences, feelings, and viewpoints. The role play methodology of BLU_D07 is designed to stretch this capacity. Good role play at this age moves students out of their default point of view and into someone else's shoes. As a teacher, your role in debriefing the role play is as important as the role play itself. Do not skip the debrief.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 1 — Respecting Elders

Learning Objective: Students demonstrate 3 specific respectful behaviours toward elders in a role-play scenario.

Materials: BLU_D07 Chapter 1 role play script; role cards (Elder, Young Person, Observer); chairs arranged in a living room configuration; name tags for roles

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask: "Name one elder in your life — a grandparent, a neighbour, a teacher. What is one thing they have taught you?" Allow 3–4 students to share. Affirm each contribution warmly.

Main Activity (25 minutes) Assign roles using role cards — Elder, Young Person, and Observers (who have a specific job: watch for the 3 respectful behaviours). Read through the script once as a class without acting (everyone just follows along). Rehearse once with assigned students in role. Perform the full role play.

Debrief: Turn to the Observers first: "What specific behaviours did you see that showed respect?" Then ask the Elder: "How did it feel to be greeted that way?" Then the Young Person: "Was there a moment that felt awkward? Why?"

Reflection (10 minutes) Students write (one or two sentences each) in their textbook: "What would I change in how I greet elders at home?" Share 2–3 responses voluntarily.

Assessment Method Ongoing observation: Does the student greet the teacher with proper respect upon entering the classroom each day? Does the student stand when addressing a visiting adult? Note on rubric.

Lesson Plans: Chapters 2–5 (Summary Format)

Chapter 2 — Queuing and Waiting

Objective: Students queue without pushing in 4 different school scenarios (canteen, classroom door, water fountain, morning assembly).

Materials: BLU_D07 Chapter 2 pages; scenario cards; optional floor tape to mark a queue line.

Warm-up: Ask: "What happens when there's no order in a queue? Has anyone been pushed or shoved while waiting? How did it feel?"

Main Activity: Read the scenario. Practice actual queuing in the classroom — set up 3–4 stations and run mini role plays at each. The teacher narrates: "The bell rings — everyone wants to be first out the door. What do we do?" Students practice slow, respectful queuing with commentary. Discuss: Why does queuing matter? Who does it protect? (Often the smaller, younger, less powerful people.) Connect to respect for others' time and safety.

Reflection: "Who benefits most from a culture of fair queuing? Think about younger children, smaller students, people with disabilities."

Assessment: Observe at actual queue points in the school. Note consistency.

Chapter 3 — Speaking Respectfully in Public

Objective: Students use an appropriate volume and tone in 3 different public school contexts (library, corridor, assembly).

Materials: BLU_D07 Chapter 3 pages; "voice level" visual card (0 = silent, 1 = whisper, 2 = talking voice, 3 = presentation voice, 4 = outdoor voice); scenario cards.

Warm-up: Teacher demonstrates all 4 voice levels with the same sentence. Ask: "Which voice level is right for the library? The classroom? The playground? The corridor?"

Main Activity: Map the school together — draw a simple floor plan (classroom, corridor, canteen, library, playground) and decide together which voice level is appropriate for each. Students practice role-play conversations at the right volume for 3 different contexts. Observe and coach.

Reflection: "Why does voice level show respect for others? Think about someone who is trying to concentrate, or someone who is ill, or someone who is praying."

Assessment: Observe in actual school contexts. Note on rubric.

Chapter 4 — Apologising and Forgiving

Objective: Students deliver a sincere, specific apology in role play and accept an apology graciously.

Materials: BLU_D07 Chapter 4 pages; apology script template ("I'm sorry for [specific action]. It was wrong because [impact]. I will try to [change]."); scenario cards.

Warm-up: Ask: "What's the difference between 'Sorry!' shouted over your shoulder and a real apology?" Discuss.

Main Activity: Read the scenario. Introduce the 3-part apology structure. Students practice with a scenario card: something they did that caused harm. They write out the apology first using the template, then deliver it to a partner. The partner practices receiving it graciously: "Thank you for saying that. I accept your apology." Debrief: "What makes an apology feel real? What makes it feel fake?"

Reflection: "Is there something you've needed to apologise for that you haven't yet? You don't have to share it — just think about it."

Assessment: Observe during conflicts in the classroom — does the student attempt a genuine apology? Does the student accept apologies without holding a grudge?

Chapter 5 — Difference and Inclusion

Objective: Students identify one way they can include someone who is often left out.

Materials: BLU_D07 Chapter 5 pages; inclusion scenario cards; "circle of care" worksheet.

Warm-up: Ask: "Can you think of a time you felt left out? You don't have to share — just remember how it felt." Pause. Ask: "Can you think of a time you left someone else out?"

Main Activity: Read the scenario. Discuss: Who gets left out in our school? Why? Is it always intentional? What can one person do? Role play 3–4 scenarios in which one student is on the edge of a group — what does an inclusive person do specifically? (Moves closer, says "come join us," saves a seat, invites them by name.) Practice the specific verbal and physical actions of inclusion.

Reflection: Students fill in "circle of care" — naming 3 people they will look out for this week.

Assessment: Observation of playground and classroom behaviour. Teacher note: do not force inclusion — it creates resentment. Model it; encourage it; never mandate it publicly.

Teacher Note on This Chapter Chapter 5 on inclusion may surface experiences of exclusion related to disability, economic difference, or religious difference. Handle with care. If students name specific people as "always left out," redirect to systems and habits rather than individual blame. "What can WE do as a class?" — not "Why does so-and-so always do this?"

Class 3 Observation Rubric

Behaviour	Not Yet Observed	Emerging	Consistent
Uses correct greeting in different contexts
Waits in line without pushing

Speaks at appropriate volume in public areas of school
Apologises sincerely when causing harm
Accepts an apology graciously

Class 3 Parent Letter Template [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Your child is now in the Blu Foundation Manners and Etiquette Programme — Class 3. This term's focus is "Respect Around Me": respecting elders, queuing and waiting, appropriate public speech, apologising and forgiving, and including others.

You can support this at home by:

1. When your child says sorry, help them make it a real apology — "What exactly happened? How do you think the other person felt? What will you do differently?" The 3-part structure we use at school is: what I did, why it was wrong, what I will change.
2. Praise your child when you see them include someone — name it: "I saw you invite your cousin into the game. That was kind."
3. If you see disrespectful behaviour toward an elder in the home, address it calmly and refer to what they are learning at school: "At Blu, they're learning about respecting elders. What do you think the right behaviour was there?"

CLASS 4 TEACHER GUIDE

Overview

Item	Detail
Student Textbook	BLU_D08 "I Speak, I Connect"
Ages	9–10
Methodology	Case studies, communication workshops, digital scenarios
Schedule	2–3 × 40-minute periods per week
Duration	10 weeks
Assessment	Observation rubric; written reflections; peer observation; no marks

Class 4 introduces significantly more complex communication skills. Students at age 9–10 are beginning to navigate peer social dynamics with greater sophistication — and greater risk. Friendships deepen; so does conflict. Social media and digital communication are entering many students' lives. The case study methodology of BLU_D08 is designed for this complexity: real-seeming scenarios allow students to reason about situations that mirror their own experiences without the vulnerability of discussing those experiences directly.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 1 — Communication Styles

Learning Objective: Students identify aggressive, passive, and assertive communication styles and write assertive responses to 5 challenging situations.

Materials: BLU_D08 Chapter 1 case study; "What Would You Say?" worksheet (5 challenging scenarios); scenario cards; optional: a simple 3-column chart on the board labelled Aggressive / Passive / Assertive

Warm-up (5 minutes) Teacher demonstrates three responses to the same situation: "Your friend takes your pen without asking." Aggressive: "Give that back RIGHT NOW, I hate when you do that!" Passive: [looks away, says nothing, mutters under breath]. Assertive: "Hey, that's my pen — can you ask before you borrow it next time? Thanks." Ask: "Which response am I showing? How can you tell? Which one actually solves the problem?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the case study together. Individually, students complete the "What Would You Say?" worksheet: for each of 5 situations, they write an assertive response (not aggressive, not passive). Share responses in pairs and discuss: Is this assertive? How could it be more assertive? More respectful?

Class debrief: share 3–4 responses per situation. Identify together: which is most assertive? What specific words or phrases make it assertive? Build a class "assertive language bank" on the board (phrases like "I feel... when...", "Please...", "I'd prefer...", "Can we...?").

Reflection (10 minutes) Students write their "My Commitment" pledge: "This term, I commit to using assertive communication when [situation]." Share voluntarily. Post commitments on the class notice board (anonymously if preferred).

Assessment Method Listen actively during class discussions over the following weeks: do students use assertive language when disagreeing or making requests? Note on rubric.

Lesson Plans: Chapters 2–5 (Summary Format)

Chapter 2 — Active Listening in Conversation

Objective: Students demonstrate 4 active listening behaviours during a structured conversation.

Materials: BLU_D08 Chapter 2 pages; active listening checklist (eye contact, nod/affirm, don't interrupt, ask a follow-up question); partner conversation timer.

Warm-up: Ask two volunteers to have a conversation — one practices terrible listening (phone out, looking around, interrupting). Ask the class to count how many listening errors they spot.

Main Activity: Introduce the 4 active listening behaviours. Structured partner conversation: Partner A speaks for 90 seconds on a topic (e.g., "something I'm proud of"); Partner B demonstrates all 4 active listening behaviours. Observer (a third student) marks the checklist. Rotate roles. Debrief: "Which behaviour was hardest? What did it feel like to be truly listened to?"

Reflection: "How would our class — and our home — feel different if everyone listened like this?"

Assessment: Observe during class discussions: are active listening behaviours present? Note emerging vs consistent.

Chapter 3 — Giving and Receiving Feedback

Objective: Students give one piece of constructive feedback using the "two stars and a wish" format and receive feedback without becoming defensive.

Materials: BLU_D08 Chapter 3 pages; "two stars and a wish" template; peer feedback exercise (students review a partner's drawing, story, or school project using the format).

Warm-up: Ask: "Has anyone ever given you criticism that felt unfair or harsh? What made it feel that way? Has someone given you feedback that actually helped you improve? What was different about how they did it?"

Main Activity: Introduce "two stars and a wish": Two genuine positive observations + one constructive suggestion, framed as "I wish..." or "What if...?" Practice with a peer exercise: students review a partner's completed BLU_D08 activity or another piece of work and write feedback using the template. Deliver feedback verbally. Practice receiving: "Thank you for that — I'll think about the wish."

Reflection: "What makes it hard to receive feedback gracefully? What helps?"

Assessment: Observe during peer review activities — is the student's feedback kind and specific? Does the student receive feedback without becoming upset or dismissive?

Chapter 4 — Disagreeing Respectfully

Objective: Students use respectful disagreement language in a structured debate.

Materials: BLU_D08 Chapter 4 pages; respectful disagreement phrase cards ("I see it differently...", "I understand your point, but...", "Can I add something?"); debate topic cards (topics related to the textbook — no political topics).

Warm-up: Ask: "Is it possible to disagree with someone AND still respect them? Can you give an example from your life?"

Main Activity: Introduce respectful disagreement phrases. Structured mini-debate: small groups of 4, each group gets a topic card (e.g., "Is it ever okay to be late?" or "Is saying sorry enough?"). Groups must disagree respectfully — no raised voices, no personal attacks, only the phrases on the cards. Teacher circulates, coaching language in real time. Debrief: which group demonstrated the most respectful disagreement?

Reflection: Students write: "What's the difference between disagreeing with an idea and attacking a person?"

Assessment: Observe during natural class disagreements — does the student use respectful language or escalate?

Chapter 5 — Digital Etiquette and Cyberbullying

Objective: Students identify 3 rules of digital etiquette and name 2 steps to take if they experience or witness cyberbullying.

Materials: BLU_D08 Chapter 5 pages; digital scenario cards; anonymous question box (physical box where students can submit questions or disclosures anonymously).

Warm-up: Ask: "Raise your hand if you use a phone, tablet, or computer to communicate with people outside school." Acknowledge the reality of students' digital lives. "What's one rule you follow when you're online?" Take 3–4 answers.

Main Activity: Read the digital scenarios — students identify: Is this okay? Why/why not? What would you do? Introduce 3 core rules of digital etiquette: think before you send (would you say this to their face?); private information stays private; screenshots are permanent. Discuss cyberbullying: what is it? How is it different from in-person bullying? What can you do? Introduce the anonymous question box — students can submit questions about digital situations they've encountered.

Reflection: Students write a personal "digital pledge" — 3 commitments for their online behaviour.

Assessment: Review of digital pledges (voluntary sharing only); observe whether students apply these principles in any school-adjacent digital contexts.

Important Note on Chapter 5 — Cyberbullying

This topic may surface personal, ongoing experiences of bullying — digital or otherwise. Before teaching this chapter, establish explicitly: "What's shared in this class stays here." Have the anonymous question box ready. At the end of class, review any submissions privately.

If a student discloses ongoing bullying — digital or physical — follow your school's reporting and support protocol immediately. Do not attempt to resolve active bullying within the lesson.

Be prepared to follow up privately with any student who appears distressed during this session. Know your school's safeguarding contacts before you teach this chapter.

Class 4 Observation Rubric

Class 4 Parent Letter Template [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Your child is in Class 4 of the Blu Foundation Manners and Etiquette Programme. This term's topic is "I Speak, I Connect" — covering communication styles (assertive vs passive vs aggressive), active listening, giving and receiving feedback, respectful disagreement, and digital etiquette.

You can support this at home by:

1. Noticing your own communication style with your child. When you model assertive (not aggressive or passive) communication, your child internalises it faster than any lesson can teach.
2. Discussing digital use together: "What's a rule we should have in our family about messaging and social media?" Involve your child in making the rule.
3. If your child tells you about a situation involving unkind behaviour online or in person, listen fully before advising. Ask: "What do you think you should do?" — then support them in acting on it.

If you have concerns about your child's digital safety or social wellbeing, please contact [Teacher Name] directly.

CLASS 5 TEACHER GUIDE

Overview

Item	Detail
Student Textbook	BLU_D09 "My Community, My Responsibility"
Ages	10–11
Methodology	Projects, community challenges, peer leadership
Schedule	2–3 × 40-minute periods per week
Duration	10 weeks
Assessment	Observation rubric; project portfolio; Ambassador showcase; no marks

Class 5 is the culminating year of the Blu Foundation programme. Students at age 10–11 are ready to move from being recipients of etiquette education to being active agents of change in their communities. The project-based methodology of BLU_D09 reflects this developmental readiness. The Community Challenge and Etiquette Ambassador Showcase are the centrepieces of this year: they give students real responsibility, real audiences, and real impact — not simulated ones.

Your role in Class 5 shifts from instructor and facilitator to coach and supporter. Step back more. Ask more questions than you answer. Let students lead.

Lesson Plan: Chapter 1 — Citizen Rights and Responsibilities

Learning Objective: Students name 3 civic rights and 3 corresponding civic responsibilities, and design at least one thoughtful interview question for their Community Challenge.

Materials: BLU_D09 Chapter 1 text and project introduction; rights/responsibilities table (two-column worksheet); interview question template; optional: printed simplified version of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child

Warm-up (5 minutes) Ask: "What do you think you have the RIGHT to as a child in Bangladesh?" Take 4–5 responses. Write them on the board without editing. "Now — for every right, is there a responsibility that comes with it?"

Main Activity (25 minutes) Read the project introduction in BLU_D09 together. Complete the rights/responsibilities table as a class: for each right named (to education, to safety, to play, to express opinions, to healthcare), students identify the corresponding responsibility (to attend and take learning seriously, to keep others safe, to allow others to play, to listen to others' opinions, to not waste medical resources). This is not about "earning" rights — it is about living in a community where rights are mutual.

In pairs, students design their interview questions for the Community Challenge. The challenge: interview one community member (elder, shopkeeper, religious leader, neighbour) about their experience of community responsibility. Brief rehearsals of how to approach and interview an elder respectfully — greeting, introduction of purpose, listening without interrupting, thanking at the end.

Reflection (10 minutes) "What surprised you about the concept of responsibility paired with rights? Do you think most people think about both sides, or just the rights side?"

Assessment Method Did the student complete their community interview over the following week? Observe the quality of the interview questions and the student's approach to the interviewee. Note on rubric.

Lesson Plans: Chapters 2–5 (Summary Format — Emphasising Project Facilitation)

Chapter 2 — Formal Contexts: School, Office, and Public Events

Objective: Students use formal language and behaviour in 3 different contexts and can explain why formality matters.

Materials: BLU_D09 Chapter 2 pages; formal vs informal scenario cards; optional: formal letter template for the Ambassador project.

Warm-up: "What's the difference between how you talk with your best friend and how you talk to a teacher or principal? Why?"

Main Activity: Introduce the concept of register — we all speak differently in different contexts, and that's not dishonest, it's socially intelligent. Role play 3 formal contexts: introducing yourself to a guest speaker; writing a formal letter to the school principal; speaking at a school assembly. Students practice each, with coaching on vocabulary, posture, and tone. Connect to Ambassador project: their presentation at the showcase will use formal register.

Reflection: "Does being formal mean you're being fake? Why or why not?"

Assessment: Observe language register during the showcase presentation and any formal school contexts.

Chapter 3 — The Environment as Community Responsibility

Objective: Students design one concrete environmental action for their Ambassador project and connect it to community etiquette.

Materials: BLU_D09 Chapter 3 pages; environmental action planning worksheet; connection to Community Challenge interview data.

Warm-up: "What is one environmental problem in your neighbourhood that bothers you? What caused it?"

Main Activity: Read the case study. Students review their Community Challenge interview data: what did their interviewee say about community responsibility? Does any of it connect to the environment? Students design one small, real environmental action they could take (organising a litter pick, making a poster for their building, speaking to younger students about waste). This becomes part of their Ambassador project if they choose.

Reflection: "Is littering an etiquette issue? Defend your answer."

Assessment: Did the student follow through on their environmental action? Observed or self-reported in Ambassador project.

Chapter 4 — Peer Leadership and Mentoring Younger Students

Objective: Students plan and deliver one 5-minute etiquette lesson to a Class 1 or Class 2 student.

Materials: BLU_D09 Chapter 4 pages; lesson planning template; coordination with Class 1/2 teachers.

Warm-up: "Can you remember being in Class 1? What did you know then that you know now? What do you wish someone had taught you earlier?"

Main Activity: Introduce peer leadership: Class 5 students will visit a lower class and teach one etiquette concept. Students choose their topic, plan their 5-minute lesson using the template (objective, activity, key message), and practice in pairs. Coordinate with the Class 1 or Class 2 teacher to schedule the visit.

Reflection: After the visit — "What was hardest about teaching? What did you learn about yourself from trying to teach someone else?"

Assessment: Quality of lesson plan; quality of delivery (observed by teacher); reflection quality.

Facilitation Note This is often the most powerful activity in the entire Class 5 programme. When students teach, they internalise the content at a deeper level than when they are taught. It also gives younger students a near-peer model — a 10-year-old demonstrating good manners is sometimes more persuasive than an adult doing the same.

Chapter 5 — Etiquette Ambassador Project and Showcase

Objective: Students complete and present their Etiquette Ambassador project to an audience that includes peers, teachers, and (if possible) parents and community members.

Materials: BLU_D09 Chapter 5 pages; Ambassador project portfolio; presentation space; [FOUNDER INPUT REQUIRED: Design and print Etiquette Ambassador certificates for all Class 5 students]

Project Facilitation Over Weeks 9–10: Students have been building their Ambassador project throughout the term. In the final 2 weeks, shift all class time to coaching and rehearsal. Each student should have: a completed Community Challenge interview write-up; a documented action they took (environmental, peer leadership, or other); and a short presentation (3–5 minutes) summarising what they learned and what they did.

Presentations can take any form: spoken, visual display, a poster, a demonstration, a short performance. What matters is that the student can explain their project and what it meant to them.

The Showcase Event: Host the showcase in a way that makes it feel significant — rearrange the room, invite parents or community guests if possible, have a student MC introduce each presenter. Celebrate every project without ranking them. Close the showcase with a collective moment: "We began this programme in Class 1 learning to say please and thank you. Look at what you are doing now."

Issue each student their Etiquette Ambassador certificate [FOUNDER INPUT REQUIRED: Design and print Ambassador certificates before the showcase date].

Assessment Method: Did the student complete and present their Ambassador project? Quality of reflection and presentation. Note on rubric.

Class 5 Parent Letter Template [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent/Guardian,

Your child is in Class 5 — the final and most exciting year of the Blu Foundation Manners and Etiquette Programme. This year, they become active community members: completing a Community Challenge interview, taking a real environmental or social action, teaching younger students, and presenting their Etiquette Ambassador project at our end-of-term showcase.

We would love your involvement:

1. Support your child's Community Challenge interview — help them identify a suitable community member to speak with (a grandparent, a neighbour, a local business owner). The interview questions will come home with them.
2. Attend the Etiquette Ambassador Showcase at the end of term [DATE TO BE CONFIRMED]. Your presence means a great deal to your child.
3. If you have a skill, a story, or a community connection that could enrich your child's Ambassador project, let us know — we welcome parent involvement.

Your child has grown significantly over this programme. Thank you for supporting their journey.

With warm regards, [Teacher Name] [School Name]

Cross-Cutting Activities (All Class Levels)

Manners Minute — Whole-School Assembly

Each morning assembly includes a "Manners Minute": a Class 5 student shares a 1-minute etiquette tip with the whole school. Topics rotate weekly and align with the current BLU_D05–D09 curriculum chapters. This creates a visible, school-wide culture of etiquette and gives Class 5 students a leadership platform.

Organise a schedule at the start of term: assign one Class 5 student per week, provide them with a brief template ("This week's Manners Minute is about [topic]. The tip is: [behaviour]. Why it matters: [reason]. Here is an example: [scenario]."), and give them 5 minutes of coaching before their assembly. Rotate through all Class 5 students over the course of the term.

Inter-Class Etiquette Challenge — Monthly

Each month, run a school-wide Etiquette Challenge. Examples:

- Month 1 — Greetings Challenge: Which class has the highest rate of students greeting the teacher upon entry?
- Month 2 — Queue Challenge: Which class demonstrates the best queuing behaviour at the canteen?
- Month 3 — Listening Challenge: During morning sharing time, which class has the fewest interruptions?
- Month 4 — Kindness Challenge: Which class reports or is observed performing the most unprompted kind acts?

Track results on a school noticeboard. Celebrate the winning class with a simple, non-competitive recognition (a certificate, a mention in assembly, a free-choice activity period). Avoid prizes that create significant inequality between classes.

The purpose of the challenge is not competition — it is making etiquette visible and school-wide. The noticeboard creates a culture in which manners are noticed and valued by the whole community.

Teacher Monthly Self-Reflection Tool

At the end of each month, take 10 minutes to reflect using these questions. You do not need to share this with anyone. It is for your own professional growth.

1. Am I greeting every student by name every day?
2. Am I using respectful, calm language with students even when I am frustrated?
3. Am I consistent in how I enforce etiquette expectations — or do I apply different standards to different students?
4. Have I caught myself being sarcastic or dismissive with a student this month?
5. Do I apologise to students when I make a mistake, and model the 3-part apology structure?
6. Am I maintaining the ground rules I set in Week 1?
7. Have I followed up privately with any student who seemed distressed?
8. Am I facilitating gender-equitably — giving equal airtime and affirmation to all students?
9. Am I holding space for multiple religious and cultural backgrounds in my facilitation?
10. Is there one specific behaviour I am modelling particularly well? One I need to work on?

Research consistently shows that teacher behaviour is the strongest mediator of etiquette and SEL programme outcomes. Teachers who engage in regular self-reflection and who have institutional support to do so produce the best results [SOURCE_UK_02].

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: What if a student's home behaviour conflicts directly with what we teach at school?

A: Never criticise the student's home, family, or parents in front of the student or the class. It is deeply harmful and will cause the student to disengage from the programme. Instead, frame it clearly as a school standard: "At school, our way is..." and leave the contrast implicit. Over time, students who experience genuine respect and safety at school often carry those standards home. The programme is a long-term investment, not a quick fix.

Q: What if a student discloses being abused or harmed at home?

A: This is completely beyond the scope of the etiquette programme. Do not explore or probe the disclosure within the lesson. Acknowledge the student calmly and privately ("Thank you for telling me. I'm going to make sure the right person knows about this.") and follow your school's child protection and safeguarding reporting protocol immediately. Contact your designated safeguarding lead the same day.

Q: What if religious content or examples cause tension between students?

A: Keep all content inclusive and never favour one religious tradition in facilitation. If a student or parent objects to a specific religious reference in the material, listen to them respectfully, do not argue, flag the issue to Blu Foundation via your school's programme coordinator, and use the inclusive alternative framing ("Whatever words your family uses...", "Whether you say Bismillah, say grace, or simply pause to be grateful..."). The programme is not a religious programme — it is an etiquette programme. Religious references are examples, not doctrine.

Q: What if a student uses this programme as an opportunity to criticise a classmate publicly?

A: Redirect firmly and immediately: "We're talking about situations in general — not about specific people in our class." If the student persists, address it privately after class. The ground rules established in Week 1 (no naming, no shaming) are your authority here.

Q: How do I assess etiquette without giving marks?

A: Use the observation rubric for each class level. Observe students in natural settings — not just during lessons. Write a short narrative comment for each student at term end: what they have demonstrated, what they are working toward, one specific example. Never rank children by "best manners" — this is counterproductive and unkind. If a school administrator requires a mark or grade, consult Blu Foundation for guidance on how to translate narrative observations into whatever format is required.

Q: What if I disagree with some of the content in the student textbooks?

A: Raise it with your school's programme coordinator, who will bring it to Blu Foundation. Do not modify content unilaterally. If a specific element creates genuine difficulty for your classroom context (cultural, religious, or contextual), use the inclusive alternative framing and flag the issue formally so Blu Foundation can update materials for future editions.

Q: What if students find the role plays embarrassing or refuse to participate?

A: Never force participation in role play. Role play is inherently vulnerable, especially for shy or anxious students. Always offer alternatives: observe and give feedback, write a response instead of speaking it, or participate as a "director" who coaches other students. Over time, as the classroom culture becomes safer, reluctant participants often choose to join. Trust the process.
