Blu Foundation | Class 2 | Ages 7–8 Version: 1.0 DRAFT | Date: June 2026

A Note to Students

Hello, Class 2!

You have already learned many wonderful things. Now you are ready to go deeper.

This book is called "I Eat, I Care." It is about the way we eat, the way we stay clean, the way we treat the things and people around us — and the way we show kindness every day.

Each chapter has a story, activities you will do with friends, and a checklist to try at home. By the end of this book, you will have practised so many good habits that they will feel completely natural to you.

Some of the best things you will learn are small — knocking before you enter a room, saying Bismillah before you eat, bringing a glass of water to someone who is tired. Small things make a big difference.

Let's begin!

A Note to Parents / অভিভাবকদের প্রতি একটি বার্তা [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Dear Parent or Guardian,

Your child is studying etiquette and character through Blu Foundation's "I Eat, I Care" programme. This textbook covers five areas: dining manners, personal hygiene, respecting others' space, kindness at home, and home rules.

Each chapter includes a Parent Corner written especially for you. These short notes explain what your child is learning that week and suggest one simple thing you can do together at home to reinforce it.

You do not need to teach anything formally. Your daily example — the way you eat, the way you speak to others, the way you follow your own home rules — is the most powerful teacher of all.

Thank you for being your child's first and most important etiquette guide.

Warm regards, The Blu Foundation Team

A Note to Teachers

Pedagogical approach: This textbook follows the Blu Foundation activity-based learning model. Students are not passive recipients of rules; they discover, practise, and reflect on good behaviour through scenarios, role play, drawing, and structured discussion.

Language: All key Bengali terms are flagged [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]. Translators should ensure register is accessible to a 7–8 year old reader.

Virtues framework: Each chapter foregrounds one virtue (Respect or Discipline or Kindness). Teachers are encouraged to display the virtue word visibly during the chapter and return to it in discussion.

Checklists: The Good Habits Checklists at the end of each chapter are designed to go home with students. Encourage families to use them during the relevant week.

Timing: Each chapter is designed for approximately two 40-minute sessions. Activity 2 in most chapters involves pairing or grouping — plan seating accordingly.

Source annotations: Citations marked [SOURCE_XX] are for internal curriculum team reference and should be removed from the printed student edition.

Chapter 1: At the Table — Dining Manners

Virtue: Respect | সম্মান [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Learning Objective: Students will demonstrate 5 correct dining manners consistently.

Our Story: Dinner at Nanu's House

It was Eid dinner at Nanu's house. The smell of rice, dal, and chicken curry filled the whole room. Tariq was so hungry that the moment the food was placed on the table, he grabbed the biggest piece of chicken — even though Nanu had not yet sat down.

He used his left hand to scoop rice, spoke loudly with his mouth full, and within ten minutes, had left half his plate uneaten. "I'm full!" he said, pushing back his chair.

Nanu sat down quietly. She looked at Tariq with kind eyes. "Come, let me show you something," she said.

She explained: we wait until our elders are seated before we begin. We eat with our right hand — this is the way of our faith and our culture. We chew slowly, with our mouths closed, so that others can enjoy their meal peacefully. We say Bismillah (বিসমিল্লাহ [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]) before we start and Alhamdulillah (আলহামদুলিল্লাহ [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]) when we finish. And we try to finish what is on our plate — because food is a gift, and wasting it is disrespectful to the one who cooked it and to those who have less.

Tariq listened. The next day at breakfast, he tried all five things. Nanu noticed, and she smiled the biggest smile he had ever seen.

[Illustration: A warm family dinner scene. Tariq sits politely, right hand on food, waiting as Nanu takes her seat. Speech bubble shows "Bismillah!"]

Key Dining Manners

1. Wait for elders and adults before starting to eat. When someone older than you is still sitting down or has not yet been served, wait. This shows respect for them.

- 2. Eat with the right hand. In Bangladeshi culture and Islamic practice, eating with the right hand is a sign of cleanliness and respect. [SOURCE_ALT_07] We use the right hand for eating and for giving and receiving things.
- 3. Do not talk with food in your mouth. Finish chewing and swallowing before you speak. Talking with a full mouth is uncomfortable for others to see and hear.
- 4. Chew quietly — do not slurp. Eat at a calm pace. Loud slurping or smacking sounds disturb others at the table.
- 5. Do not waste food — finish what is on your plate. Take only what you can eat. If you are unsure how much you want, take a little and ask for more later. Wasting food is disrespectful to those who worked hard to prepare it and to those who do not have enough.
- 6. Say Bismillah before eating and Alhamdulillah after. Bismillah (بِسْمِ اللَّهِ) means "In the name of Allah." Alhamdulillah (الْحَمْدُ لِلَّهِ) means "All praise is for Allah." These words remind us to be grateful for our food. [SOURCE_ALT_07] [SOURCE_ALT_08]

Activity 1 — Match It! (Individual)

Instructions: Draw a line from each mealtime situation on the left to the correct behaviour on the right.

Situation	Correct Behaviour
The food is on the table but Baba is still washing his hands.	Say "Bismillah" and begin.
You have finished your meal.	Wait until Baba is seated.
Your mouth is full and your friend asks you a question.	Eat with your right hand.
You want to take some rice.	Chew, swallow, then answer.
You are about to start eating.	Say "Alhamdulillah."

[Teacher note: This activity can be printed as a matching worksheet. Provide extra blank lines for students who finish early to write one more situation of their own.]

Activity 2 — Mealtime Role Play (Paired)

Instructions: Work with a partner. One of you is the Host (you live in the house). The other is the Guest (you have come for lunch). Use the props your teacher provides (a plate, a cup, some pretend food).

Host: Welcome your guest, serve them food, and demonstrate all five dining manners.

Guest: Thank your host, eat politely, and use all five dining manners.

After two minutes, switch roles.

Discussion (whole class): What felt natural? What felt hard to remember? Which manner do you most want to practise at home?

[Teacher note: Circulate and gently prompt students who forget a manner. After the role play, list the five manners on the board and have students rate each one: "Easy / I need to practise."]

Take this checklist home! At every meal this week, check each box.

Parent Corner / অভিভাবকের কোণ [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

This week in school: We are learning five dining manners — waiting for elders, eating with the right hand, not talking with food in the mouth, not wasting food, and saying Bismillah and Alhamdulillah.

What you can do: During meals this week, gently remind your child of these habits if you notice one being missed. Keep your tone encouraging rather than corrective — "Remember, let's wait for Dadu to sit down" rather than "You forgot again." When you see your child practising a manner correctly, name it: "I noticed you waited for me before starting. That is very respectful." Your praise means everything.

Chapter 2: Clean Hands, Healthy Me — Extended Hygiene

Virtue: Discipline | শৃঙ্খলা [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Learning Objective: Students will explain when and how to wash hands properly.

Our Story: Rafi's Tummy Ache

Rafi had been playing outside all afternoon. His hands were dusty and his fingers had soil under the nails. When his mother called him for lunch, he ran straight to the table and started eating. He did the same thing the next day. And the day after that.

On the third day, Rafi's tummy started to hurt. By evening, he had a fever. His mother took him to the doctor.

Dr. Nasrin examined Rafi carefully. "Tell me," she said, "do you wash your hands before eating?"

Rafi looked at the floor. "Not always."

Dr. Nasrin smiled kindly. "Tiny things called germs live on our hands. We cannot see them, but they travel from our hands into our food, and then into our body. That is how many children get sick."

She taught Rafi the six steps of proper handwashing. "Twenty seconds of scrubbing — that is all it takes to wash the germs away," she said.

Rafi went home determined. He stuck the six steps on the bathroom wall. He washed his hands before every meal, after every visit to the toilet, and after playing outside. Within three days, he was completely well again. And he has not forgotten since.

[Illustration: Six-panel diagram showing each handwashing step with friendly cartoon hands. Final panel: Rafi eating happily, hands clean, smile on face.]

The Six Steps of Handwashing

Step 1 — Wet Turn on the tap. Wet both hands completely with clean water.

Step 2 — Soap Apply soap to your palms. Any soap is fine — bar soap or liquid soap both work.

Step 3 — Lather (20 seconds) Rub your palms together to make lather. Count slowly to twenty — or sing the alphabet song once all the way through. This is how long the soap needs to work.

Step 4 — Scrub between fingers and under nails Interlace your fingers and rub them together. Use your fingernails of one hand to scrub the palm of the other. Clean under each nail.

Step 5 — Rinse Hold your hands under running water and rinse off all the soap. Make sure no soap is left on your skin.

Step 6 — Dry Dry your hands with a clean towel or shake them dry in the air. Wet hands pick up more germs than dry hands.

When Must You Wash Your Hands?

- Before eating any food or drink
- After using the toilet
- After playing outside or touching animals
- After sneezing or coughing into your hands
- After touching rubbish or dirty objects

More Clean Habits

Brushing your teeth: Brush your teeth twice every day — once in the morning after waking up, and once at night before sleeping. Use a small amount of toothpaste and brush for two minutes. Healthy teeth help you eat well and speak clearly.

Bathing regularly: Bathe every day, or at least every other day, especially in hot weather. Soap away sweat and dirt from your body. Pay attention to behind your ears, between your toes, and under your arms.

Clean nails: Keep your nails short and clean. Long nails trap dirt and germs underneath. Ask a parent or adult to help you trim your nails once a week.

Activity 1 — Put It in Order! (Individual)

Instructions: The six handwashing steps below are in the wrong order. Write the numbers 1–6 in the boxes to put them in the correct sequence.

Step	Box
Rinse off all the soap under running water.	☐
Apply soap to your palms.	☐
Dry your hands with a clean towel.	☐
Wet both hands with clean water.	☐
Rub your palms together for 20 seconds.	☐
Scrub between your fingers and under your nails.	☐

[Teacher note: After individual completion, have students check answers with a partner. Then reveal the correct order together as a class. Ask: "Which step do you think most people skip? Why?"]

Activity 2 — My Clean Body Poster (Individual)

Instructions: Draw a large outline of a person on the blank page below (or on the paper your teacher gives you). Around the outline, draw and label at least five things you do to keep your body clean and healthy.

Ideas to get you started: washing hands, brushing teeth, bathing, cutting nails, washing face, wearing clean clothes, combing hair.

Add colour to make your poster bright! Your teacher may display it in the classroom.

Parent Corner / অভিভাবকের কোণ [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

This week in school: We are learning the six steps of proper handwashing, and the importance of brushing teeth twice a day, bathing regularly, and keeping nails clean.

What you can do: Help your child practise handwashing at the sink at home. Time them — twenty seconds of scrubbing is longer than it feels! You can count together, sing a short song, or watch the second hand on a clock. If you notice your child going to the dinner table with unwashed hands, simply say: "Back to the sink — twenty seconds." No scolding needed. Consistency builds the habit.

Chapter 3: My Space, Your Space — Respecting Boundaries

Virtue: Respect | সম্মান [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Learning Objective: Students will ask before touching others' belongings and knock before entering.

Our Story: Mitu and the Pen

Mitu's older sister Priya kept her study room very tidy. Her books were arranged in a row, her pens in a cup, and her notebooks in a neat pile.

One afternoon, Mitu needed a pen. Instead of asking, she simply walked into Priya's room, picked up the blue pen from the cup, used it, and left it on the dining table.

When Priya came home and sat down to study, her pen was gone. She searched everywhere. When she finally found it on the table, she was upset. "Mitu, you took my pen without asking and didn't put it back. That is my space and my things."

Mitu felt sorry. She had not meant to cause a problem. She had just wanted a pen.

Their mother sat down with them both. "Every person — even inside a family — has their own space and their own things," she explained. "To respect someone means to treat their space the way you would want your space to be treated."

The next day, Mitu knocked on Priya's door. "Apa, may I please borrow your blue pen? I will give it back as soon as I'm done." Priya smiled and handed it over. The room felt warmer than before.

Rules for Respecting Space and Belongings

1. Knock before entering. Before you enter anyone's room — a family member's, a teacher's, anyone's — knock on the door and wait. If the door is open, say "Excuse me" and wait for them to acknowledge you before entering.

- 2. Ask before borrowing. Even if it is something small — a pencil, an eraser, a book — always ask first. Say: "May I borrow your ____?" or "Can I please use your ____ for a moment?"
- 3. Return things promptly. When you borrow something, give it back as soon as you are done with it. Do not leave it somewhere else. Return it to the exact place you took it from.
- 4. Do not read others' notebooks or letters. Someone else's notebook, diary, or letter is private. Reading it without permission — even out of curiosity — is a form of disrespect.
- 5. Do not touch classmates' bags or belongings without permission. At school, everyone has their own bag and desk space. Do not rummage through a friend's bag or take things from their desk — even if you think they won't mind. Always ask.

Activity 1 — Circle the Respectful Behaviour (Individual)

Instructions: Read each action below. Circle the ones that show respect for others' space. Put an X on the ones that do not.

1. Knocking on your brother's door before going in.
2. Taking your friend's coloured pencils while they are at break without asking.
3. Asking your classmate: "Can I borrow your ruler for a minute?"
4. Opening your teacher's drawer to look for the scissors without asking.
5. Returning your friend's book as soon as you finish reading it.
6. Picking up your cousin's toy to play with without saying anything.
7. Saying "Excuse me" before walking into a room where someone is working.
8. Reading a note on your deskmate's table because you are curious.

[Answer key for teacher: Circle 1, 3, 5, 7. Put X on 2, 4, 6, 8.]

Activity 2 — Knock and Ask! (Paired)

Instructions: Work with a partner. One of you is Person A (the one being asked). The other is Person B (the one who needs to borrow something). Act out each scenario below. Use polite words and wait for a response before acting.

Scenario 1: Person B needs to borrow Person A's rubber. Person A's desk is their "space." Person B knocks (taps the desk) and asks politely.

Scenario 2: Person B wants to enter Person A's "room" (two chairs facing away). Person B knocks (claps once) and waits.

Scenario 3: Person B borrowed Person A's ruler yesterday and is returning it now.

Useful phrases to practise:

- "May I borrow your ____, please?"
- "Excuse me, may I come in?"
- "I am returning your ____ — thank you for lending it to me."
- "Of course!" / "Please wait a moment." / "Sorry, I need it right now."

After the role play, discuss: How did it feel to be asked politely? How did it feel when Person B used good manners?
[Teacher note: Encourage students to use a natural voice — not overly formal. The goal is habit, not stiffness.]

This week in school: We are learning to knock before entering others' rooms, to ask before borrowing, and to return things promptly.

What you can do: Begin at home — gently establish the norm that your child knocks before entering adults' rooms, even if the door is open. Model it yourself: knock before entering your child's space too. When your child asks politely to borrow something, honour the request and give positive feedback: "I love how you asked nicely." This two-way practice makes the lesson real.

Chapter 4: Kindness Everywhere — Acts of Kindness at Home

Virtue: Kindness | দয়া [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Learning Objective: Students will perform at least 2 unprompted acts of kindness at home per week.

Our Story: Rafi's Gift to Amma

Rafi came home from school on a Tuesday and found his mother sitting on the sofa with her eyes half closed. She had been to the market in the morning, cooked lunch, washed clothes, and cleaned the house — all before noon.

Usually Rafi would drop his bag on the floor, ask for a snack, and turn on the TV. But today he stopped and really looked at his mother. He could see she was tired.

He put his bag away quietly. He went to the kitchen, poured a glass of cool water, and brought it to her with both hands. "Amma, your water," he said softly.

She opened her eyes and smiled.

Then Rafi took his own plate to the kitchen after his snack — without being asked. And when his little sister Tania started to fuss, he sat beside her and showed her how to stack blocks, so his mother could rest for a little longer.

That evening, his mother hugged him. "Rafi," she said, "you did not give me any big thing today. But you made my whole day better. That is what kindness is."

Rafi felt something warm in his chest. He decided he would try to notice when people needed help — and act, before they had to ask.

[Illustration: Rafi offering water to his mother with a gentle smile. Mother reaches out to receive it. Small inset panels: Rafi taking his plate to the kitchen, Rafi playing with Tania.]

What is Kindness?

Kindness is choosing to do something good for another person — not because you have to, but because you want to make their life a little easier or happier.

Kindness does not have to be big. The smallest actions — a smile, a glass of water, picking something up for someone — can change a person's entire day.

Small Acts of Kindness You Can Do at Home

- Bring a glass of water to a tired family member.
- Put your plate and cup in the kitchen after eating.
- Play quietly when a sibling or parent is resting.
- Help set the table before meals.
- Help clear the table after meals.
- Fold your own clothes and put them away.
- Say "good morning" and "good night" to everyone in the family.
- Hug a family member who seems sad.
- Offer to help a younger sibling with something they find hard.
- Say "thank you" when someone does something for you.

Activity 1 — My Kindness List (Individual)

Instructions: In the spaces below, write five kind things you can do at home this week. Try to choose things that no one has asked you to do — things you will do simply because you want to be helpful.

My five kind acts for this week:

1. _____

2. _____
3. _____
4. _____
5. _____

Challenge: Can you do all five before Friday?

[Teacher note: Have students share one item from their list with the class. This builds accountability and gives students new ideas from each other. Collect the lists and return them the following week to check in on progress.]

Activity 2 — Draw Your Kind Act (Individual)

Instructions: Think of one kind thing you have done recently for someone in your family — or one kind thing someone did for you.

Draw the moment in the box below. Add words or a speech bubble if you like.

[Blank drawing box — half page]

Below your drawing, write one sentence:

"I showed kindness when I _____."

or

"Someone was kind to me when they _____."

Parent Corner / অভিভাবকের কোণ [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

This week in school: We are learning that small, unprompted acts of kindness make a big difference to the people we love. Students will try to perform at least two kind acts at home each week — without being asked.

What you can do: Notice and name what your child does. When you catch them doing something kind — however small — say it out loud: "I saw you bring your plate to the kitchen without being asked. That was very kind." Specific praise ("I noticed you did X") is far more powerful than general praise ("Good job!"). When children feel their kindness is truly seen, they do more of it.

Chapter 5: Home Rules, Happy Home

Virtue: Discipline | শৃঙ্খলা [NEEDS BENGALI TRANSLATION]

Learning Objective: Students will name 4 home etiquette rules and explain why each matters.

Our Story: Two Homes

Imagine two homes, side by side.

In the first home, the children shout across the house when they want something. The lights in every room are always on, even empty ones. Bags and shoes are dropped wherever someone stops walking. When dinner is on the table, the children sit down without helping and leave without clearing. When a parent asks for help, the answer is usually "in a minute" — and the minute never comes.

In the second home, the children speak at a normal volume indoors. When they leave a room, they check the light switch. Shoes go by the door, bags go on the hook. Before dinner, one child helps set the table; after dinner, another helps carry plates to the kitchen. When a parent asks for help, the answer is "okay" — and they actually go.

Both homes have the same number of people. The same size. The same food. But which one feels calmer? Which one feels happier? Why?

The difference is not luck. It is habits — small, daily rules that everyone in the home agrees to follow. These rules do not make life harder. They make life smoother. And when everyone follows them together, the home becomes a place where everyone — children and adults — feels at ease.

[Illustration: Side-by-side panels. Left: chaotic home — clutter, lights blazing, children shouting, parent looking stressed. Right: calm home — tidy, one light on, children helping, parent smiling.]

Home Etiquette Rules

Rule 1: No shouting indoors. If you need someone, walk to them or speak at a calm, indoor volume. Shouting across rooms is startling and disrespectful. Even if you are excited, use your "inside voice."

Rule 2: Tidy your own belongings. Put your bag, shoes, and clothes where they belong when you come home. Do not leave your things for others to move. Your belongings are your responsibility.

Rule 3: Turn off lights when leaving a room. Before you leave any room, check the light. If you were the last one in it, turn it off. This saves electricity, saves money for your family, and is good for the environment.

Rule 4: Help set and clear the table. Mealtimes are shared moments. Helping to prepare for them and clean up afterwards is a way of contributing to the family — even if it is one small task.

Rule 5: Speak respectfully to everyone in the home. This includes parents, grandparents, older siblings, younger siblings, and any household helpers. Use polite words. Use a calm tone. No snapping, no mocking, no ignoring.

Activity 1 — Design Our Home Rules Poster (Individual/Take-Home)

Instructions: Below is a blank poster template. Fill in 5 home rules that are important to you and your family. You can use the rules from this chapter, or rules your own family already has.

Write each rule clearly. Then draw a small picture next to each rule.

[Poster template — bordered box with 5 lines, each with space for a drawing to the left:]

Our Family's Home Rules

Picture	Rule
[draw here]	1. _____
[draw here]	2. _____
[draw here]	3. _____
[draw here]	4. _____
[draw here]	5. _____

Take this poster home and display it somewhere visible — the kitchen, the dining room, or your bedroom door.

[Teacher note: Give students time to complete the poster in class or as homework. The following week, ask students to report back: Did you display it? Did your family see it? Did anyone follow a new rule because of it?]

Activity 2 — Our Class Rule-Share (Group)

Instructions: Sit in a circle or in your groups.

Each student shares one home rule that their family already follows — something that is a habit in their house.

After each student shares, the class discusses: Why does this rule help?

Discussion questions your teacher will ask:

- Why do you think shouting indoors disturbs people?
- What would happen if nobody in your house turned off lights?
- How does it feel when someone else tidies up your mess for you? How does it feel when you tidy your own?
- Can you think of a home rule that is NOT on our list?

[Teacher note: Write the shared rules on the board as students offer them. After the activity, you will likely have 15–20 rules collected from the whole class. Point out how many rules overlap — this helps students see that these are community norms, not just individual preferences. [SOURCE_BD_11]]

What you can do: Work with your child to create your family's Home Rules poster together. Let your child lead — they have ideas from class. Display it somewhere visible. When you live by these rules yourself, your child sees that rules are for everyone, not just children. Review the poster together at the end of the week: "Which rule did we do well? Which one can we improve?"

My Journal Reflection

At the end of the month, look back at your journal. Answer these questions:

1. What was the kindest thing I did this month?

2. Which good habit was easiest for me?

3. Which good habit is still hard? What will I do about it?
